Black Police Association of Greater Dallas Members: Advance Your Career in Law Enforcement with a Degree from MSU

As a law enforcement professional, you know the value of leadership. Mountain State University has leadership degrees at every level — including a new doctoral degree — that can immediately begin to position you as a leader in your job, securing your worth and advancing your career.

The Bachelor of Science in Organizational Leadership program embodies fundamental leadership concepts that are applicable to virtually any role within any organization. Designed especially for working adults, the format allows you to complete 48 semester hours in about 18 months.

If you already have your bachelor's degree, you can take your goals to the next level with MSU's Master of Science in Strategic Leadership program. At the pinnacle of higher education, the new Doctor of Executive Leadership program can prepare you for new challenges and opportunities as a scholar-practitioner.

MSU's leadership programs are offered online or in the classroom in an accelerated cohort format, which means that you complete the entire program with the same group of students to develop a diverse professional network.

Mountain State University is an accredited university with financial aid and veterans benefits available to qualifying students. Members receive a 20 percent discount on bachelor's and master's program tuition, and you can transfer TCLEOSE hours for credit toward the bachelor's degree program at no charge. Isn't it time for you to advance your career?
